

Better by Example

Community engagement and philanthropy stand at the very heart of who we are. We encourage our employees to volunteer in the community, and bring their passion and skills to the causes they care about most. We understand that a better future won't create itself. So, every day, we're working hard to make it happen by looking to our values and giving back to those places that give us so much. Employees are encouraged not only to volunteer but give back in meaningful ways through organizations that touch their own communities.

October is designated Share What We Do Well Month at WhiteWave. Throughout the month our employees across our locations spend time volunteering in their communities with non-profit or value-driven organizations. 2015 was our sixth time organizing this company-wide volunteer initiative. We had 32 different groups participate in Share What We Do Well Month, dedicating more than 2,000 volunteer hours. Volunteer initiatives varied from feeding the hungry to building playgrounds, working with children, providing support to the homeless, and preserving our open parks space.

Share What We Do Well Month truly embodies the spirit of WhiteWave. We believe our communities are our partners, and by taking care of each other, we can show the world a better way.
